CrimeStat 2 is a stand-alone spatial statistics program for the analysis of crime incident locations that can interface with most desktop GIS programs. The purpose is to provide supplemental statistical tools to aid law enforcement agencies and criminal justice researchers in their crime mapping efforts. Thus, the underlying philosophy behind CrimeStat is to provide an extension to GIS-based software for the purpose of helping researchers and analysts in their work.

The program inputs incident locations in '.dbf', '.shp', '.dat', or ASCII formats using either spherical or projected coordinates. Also, it can treat zones as pseudo-points (or points with intensities). The program calculates various spatial statistics and writes graphical objects as map features to ArcView ®, ArcGIS ®,, MapInfo ®,, Atlas*GIS TM, Surfer ®, for Windows, ArcView Spatial Analyst ©.

This product is a data mining tool that has a modular design consisting of an associative analysis engine, a graphical user interface and interfaces to virtually all common database formats. Several tasks are supported (e.g., normal queries, profile analysis, extensive graphical report facilities, etc.). The scoring tool, Targas, covers prediction of unknown information such as the possibility of response of a certain customer on some mail action. A module in DataDetective is Looking Glass. It helps the user visualize and analyze the different subgroups in a database.

·GADCMap is a customized interface that allows participating police departments in the metropolitan Atlanta area to query and map a master database of crime data collected from participating departments.
·The primary crime data are collected from police databases, including personel scheduling, incident reports, arrests, and calls for service. Secondary data are collected from geographic data sets, such as cities, counties, and police beats/zones, and from other sources, including business characteristics and resources, court records, demographics, etc.
·Simple point-and-click options allow users to create hotspot maps. For more advanced GIS users, GADCMap offers all the functionality of ArcView.
·GADCMap is designed to encourage cross-juridictional data sharing and analysis.
