MapInfo is a product from the MapInfo Corporation and is a full-featured customizable mapping software product. One of the main features the MapInfo Corporation boasts is its software's ability to interact with other Windows applications. This interaction is made possible with the use of the MapInfo Map module. This module allows users to "drag and drop" a Map window in any application that accepts Object Linking and Embedding (OLE) objects and use MapInfo's features to create, display, and edit the map directly. In this process, MapInfo acts as a server that creates a map object that can be embedded in programs such as Microsoft Word or Excel. The advantage of using this OLE process is that it means the object is "live;" that is, the user can edit the object in some manner using the features of MapInfo. Other applications generally export a static image of a map, one that cannot be edited or changed. In general, MapInfo contains similar capabilities as other GIS products.
